PROJECT HIGHLIGHT

GENSLER'S DENVER INTERNATIONAL AIRPORT'S HOTEL AND TRANSIT CENTER

Denver International Airport's (DIA) Hotel and Transit Center aims to reinvent the way people move between the DIA and the city. Providing travelers a swifter and more convenient connection between the airport and downtown Denver. The design includes three key elements:

A Hotel & Conference Center

The 519-room Westin Denver International Hotel is a swooping form of steel and glass, offering guests views of the Rockies as well as the iconic tents of the Jeppesen Terminal. Visitors will feel an immediate sense of place, and experience world-class amenities that even the savviest of travelers will admire.

A Transit Center

The Public Transit Center will connect the airport to the city via the Regional Transportation District's East Rail Line. The train station's spectacular glass and steel canopy will offer passengers views through the train station and hotel, creating a dynamic, urban atmosphere.

A Public Plaza

A beautifully landscaped outdoor plaza designed to host outdoor activities and community events connects the hotel and Public Transit Center to the existing Jeppesen Terminal.

Design and Architectural Highlights

- DIA awarded design of the hotel and conference center to Gensler in 2009, and the design of the Public Transit Center, plaza and site development in 2011.
- Elevate the experience and create a relaxing destination for travelers with amenities that provide the 21st century passenger with a world-class travel experience.
- The form that resembles a bird in flight, was inspired by the city, its surrounding natural environment and DIA's iconic tents. The hotel's curved roof form mimics the concave shape of the existing Jeppesen Terminal tents. The transit center itself is inspired by the native landscape and appears as if it emerges from the earth.
- The single, integrated building is located perpendicular to Jeppesen Terminal. Maximizing hotel and plaza patrons' views of the Rocky Mountains, downtown Denver and the Great Plains, as well as to preserve the vista of the airport terminal's signature peaked roof.
- The concept of connection is seen throughout in details such as extending the grid of the Public Transit Center's netted canopy into the interior ceiling of the conference center.
- Views from one element of the project into another give travelers an intuitive sense of where they are in relationship to the Public Transit Center, hotel, plaza and terminal.

EVENT RECAP : HAPPY HOUR @ WILL CALL

Our Happy Hour at Will Call in Industry on February 19th, was a huge success! During the evening Mark Berzins and his father, the owners of Will Call spoke about the design intent for the restaurant.

They own over 20 restaurants throughout Colorado and neighboring cities under the umbrella of the Little Pub Company. The design of the space uses refurbished items to create light fixtures, wall features, and many other design details. It was a great networking event for all who attended!
